Geological Society of Australia Incorporated

Objectives

The Society's objectives are to promote, advance and support the Earth Sciences within the scientific and wider communities.

Benefits

The Geological Society of Australia gives members an outstanding opportunity to keep in touch with scientific developments, present the results of their work, and contribute to discussions on vocational and scientific topics. As the premier Australian geoscience society, membership provides an essential network of contacts as well as publications, meetings, events, field trips, symposia and benefits including:

- Subscription to an internationally recognised and peer-reviewed scientific journal, The Australian Journal of Earth Sciences or an alternative membership journal choice of Alcheringa, the publication of the Association of Australasian Palaeontologists.
- Subscription to the GSA's magazine The Australian Geologist and to geoz, the GSA's international electronic bulletin.
- Divisional meetings held regularly across Australia featuring speakers on current topics.
- Optional membership to various Specialist Groups.
- Reduced registration rates for the biennial Australian Geological Convention.
- Member prices for the GSA's Special Publication series.
- Member Advantage – The GSA membership benefits package.

Australian Geological Convention

The 19th convention is held in conjunction with the Australian Institute of Geoscientists as the Australian Earth Sciences Convention 2008 in Perth (AESC).

Publications

Australian Journal of Earth Sciences (Scientific journal, 8 issues p.a.), Alcheringa (Palaeontology journal, 4 issues p.a.), The Australian Geologist (TAG, 4 issues p.a.); Abstracts of Conventions, Divisional and Specialist Group books and field guides. AJES is available as either hard copy & on-line, or on-line only. All Members receive TAG.

Member

Members are usually graduates of a university or other tertiary institution with a major in Earth Sciences, or graduates actively engaged in work relating to Earth Sciences. In special circumstances the Executive Committee may approve for Membership:

- people who have been employed in some technical aspect of Earth Sciences for a period of at least five years or
- people who have undertaken and published the results of research in the Earth Sciences.

Associate Member

There shall be no specific qualifications required of Associate Members, but every candidate for election must be at least 18 years old, and should produce evidence of a genuine interest in the Earth Sciences. A school or other non-commercial group may become an Associate Member. People who are eligible for Membership cannot be Associate Members, unless normally a resident outside Australia.

Joint Member

Joint Members are recognised partners of an existing Member and fulfil the Member category requirements. Joint Members have Member privileges excluding the journal.

Retired Member

A Member of the Society of at least ten years standing who has retired from professional practice is eligible to apply for Retired Membership. Retired Members retain all privileges and have the option of membership with or without the journal.

Student Member

Student members are enrolled full/part-time studying Earth Sciences at a tertiary institution or a secondary school, and must provide certification from their Head of Department on this application form. Includes students at undergraduate and postgraduate level. Student members receive the Australian Journal of Earth Sciences and the GSA online newsletter and a hard copy of The Australian Geologist. Students may choose Alcheringa for a slightly higher fee, rather than the Australian Journal of Earth Sciences. Students may be associated with a Specialist Group for additional charges or receive a hard copy of the Australian Journal of Earth Sciences for an additional fee.

Graduate Member

Graduate Members are recently qualified Earth Scientists. This category is only available for two years, normally immediately after applicants complete studies and includes AJES via internet only.

2013 Annual Membership Fees: All fees quoted are in Australian dollars

Membership is from January to December; members joining after July have the option to pay 50% of the fees and receive publications from July to December only (this option excludes 'Student Membership with journal online only and without journal', and Specialist Group subscription fees). Overseas members please add additional postage of AU$25 for the journal and AU$15 for The Australian Geologist.
